

IF DISASTER EVER OVERTAKES AMERICA IT WILL HAVE BEEN CREATED IN OUR OWN MIDST

U. S. Senator Edward Martin Tells Veterans of Foreign Wars of Three Dangers Which Threaten America — Presents Able Study of A Developing Crisis

(Because it is one of the ablest studies yet presented of the developing crisis facing the United States, the following address of U. S. Senator Edward Martin, Pennsylvania, is printed in full. The address was delivered to the Department of Pennsylvania Veterans of Foreign Wars on July 9, during the annual convention in Philadelphia.)

It is an honor to salute you as veterans who have served our country with loyalty and fidelity in many lands across the sea.

You are fighting men. You have been tested in battle. You have accomplished great things for the United States.

As an organization you have grown strong in influence and prestige because your objective in war and peace has been the defense of the most precious thing in the world—American freedom.

Your convention is dedicated to the highest ideals of Americanism. It is therefore appropriate that your meeting is held in the City of Philadelphia where individual freedom took root and flourished for the first time in the world.

Here in the wilderness, William Penn launched his Holy Experiment in government, recognizing the basic human rights of social, political and religious liberty.

Here the world's greatest document of freedom—the Declaration of Independence—was drafted and adopted. Here is the Liberty Bell and the birthplace of our flag.

The Constitution of the United States, written here in Philadelphia, was based on the proposition that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. Prior to its adoption no people on earth enjoyed that type of government.

Here men were free to think and speak, to meet in peaceable assembly, and to petition their government for redress of grievances.

They were protected in their God-given rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. They had the right to work at the job of their choice.

Above all, each individual was free to worship God in the manner dictated by his own conscience.

You all know these historic truths but they are worth retelling in meetings such as this. They are forceful reminders that individual freedom is the foundation of American greatness.

My comrades, when that freedom was threatened by foreign tyranny and aggression, America called upon you for service and sacrifice.

Today it has become necessary to sound another call for the defense of America. Not because we fear a foreign foe. American freedom will never be lost through foreign aggression. If disaster should ever overtake us it will have been created in our own midst.

There are three dangers that threaten America:

First—State Socialism or the welfare state. That can destroy the American system of free enterprise. It would mean dictatorship and the loss of all freedom.

Second—Depression and national bankruptcy. Through wasteful and extravagant spending by government and excessive taxation we are travelling along the road to financial collapse. Again the end result would be dictatorship and the loss of all freedom.

Third—a bungling policy in foreign affairs. This has robbed millions of people of their hope for freedom and now threatens our American way of life.

We are under fire on these three fronts. The time has come when we must fight to safeguard the whole structure of American liberty.

Let us consider the so-called welfare state which is another name for state socialism or its tough brother, communism.

Under that system the state is all-powerful. The government regulates, controls and directs the lives of the people under a planned and regimented economy.

It deprives the individual of all freedom in return for the false promise of security and an easy way of life.

Handouts from the government take the place of self-reliance and initiative. Work and thrift become forgotten virtues.

The people become soft. Living standards become low.

That, my comrades, is the way to dictatorship and enslavement. Hope of security without loss of liberty is a cruel delusion.

Germany and Italy are tragic examples. The financial difficulties in which England finds herself today are the direct result of her experimentation in socialism.

Without American aid England would be cold and hungry, facing a hopeless situation.

Are we to be led along the same disastrous course?

Or shall we mobilize the forces of freedom, the veterans organizations, the rank and file of labor, the business men, our churches and educational leaders in a crusade to preserve the American system? The one element responsible for the vast productive capacity of America and its foremost place in the world was freedom of the individual.

Other nations had resources equal to ours or even greater. But none has enjoyed the rights and privileges guaranteed to every citizen under the American system.

The present trend toward a socialistic pattern of government threatens those precious liberties. So-called welfare programs have been proposed that would make everyone dependent upon government.

These socialistic proposals sound attractive. They are presented as something the government is giving to the people free of cost.

That is false. The government has nothing to give except what it takes from the pockets of the taxpayers.

That is why I plead with you, my fellow veterans, to examine the history of the nations that have tried these same experiments.

Organizations like this must spearhead a drive to arouse the American people. It is most important to have the courage to say "no" when demagogues offer something for nothing.

In the battle against advancing socialism individual freedom can be preserved only if we are imbued with the spirit of work, thrift and self-reliance. We must have confidence in our country, confidence in each other and faith in God.

Now let us turn to the second threat to our freedom, the danger of a ruinous depression and national bankruptcy.

Ten days ago, when the Federal government closed its books for the fiscal year 1949, we were one billion, 811 million dollars in the red for that year alone.

This shocking, peace-time deficit shot the national debt up to almost 253 billion.

In the fiscal year of 1949 the Federal government spent more than 40 billion dollars, a new high record for peace time.

Remember—this deficit followed the calendar year of 1948 when we enjoyed a record breaking national income.

In the face of this alarming situation, a budget has been proposed increasing the cost of government to 42 billion in the new fiscal year.

In addition, a great variety of new and expanded spending programs would add many more billions to the proposed budget figure.

A SUMMARY OF THE NEWS

The nation's steel industry yesterday accepted President Truman's sixty-day strike truce plan and the Chief Executive proceeded to name a three-member board to study the wage-pension dispute between the companies and the United Steel Workers of America. Mr. Truman asked the members of the new board to report to him with their recommendations within 45 days.

While the threat of a steel strike was thus averted, at least for the time being, it appeared likely that the walkout affecting 29 bus routes in New York City would extend to take in the Third Avenue Transit System. President Quill of the Transport Workers Union summoned the union's executives to a Monday meeting to give "serious consideration" to such an extension, which would add 1,800,000 bus riders to the 1,125,000 already forced to use other forms of transportation.

The Milwaukee convention of the United Automobile Workers voted to raise a $10,000,000 strike fund to be used in the event current negotiations with the Ford Company end in failure and lead to a walkout.

The Senate Appropriations Committee acted to slash $1,010,000,000

Hammerstein's Son Is Following Dad's Steps

DOYLESTOWN, July 16—Following in his famous father's footsteps is James Hammerstein, 18-year-old son of Oscar Hammerstein, 2d, producer and lyricist, of "Highland Farm." The young man is interested in writing the music of songs rather than the lyrics.

The young collegian has written several songs for his university productions. He collaborated with Mark Barker on a revue, "Meow," and acted in the George S. Kaufman one-act play, "If Men Played Bridge the Way Women Do."

A member of the freshman tennis team, Hammerstein expects to try varsity next year. He is majoring in music, but will spend the summer on his father's 40-acre farm, where he will take part in the raising of Aberdeen Angus beef cattle.

Of all the lyrics his father has written, young Hammerstein's favorite is "Ole Man River," from the Jerome Kern-Oscar Hammerstein musical production of Edna Ferber's best seller, "Show Boat."

A NEW STRATEGY

Some smart tactician in Congress has finally worked out a new strategy of dealing with the high-binders who tell Congress one thing one time—and then "run out" on their statements when it suits their convenience.

Endless trouble has been caused in the legislative branch by this ruthless method. Over and again, Congress has agreed to proposals made by the White House, or the bureaucrats, or fellow-members, on apparently definite assurances that what they were doing would be interpreted in a certain way—only to be laughed at later for being so gullible.

Congress has appropriated money for supposedly specific purposes, and later seen it used for something quite different—once the bureaucrats got their fingers on it. It has given grants of power to administrative officials on the promise that the power would be used one way—and subsequently found the power-greedy officials using the authority in manners to which Congress never would have agreed.

This situation has been especially disturbing in the broad field of foreign affairs. Here the White House lobby and the handful of Republicans who have been working with them seem to have adopted the theory that the end justified any means. Bare-faced deception has been used over and over to get Congress to agree to schemes which eventually turned out to be quite different from what had been described.

A few examples: when the Marshall Plan was submitted, a year and a half ago, many Administrative spokesmen (some from both parties) assured Congress that the general authorization could be approved without the members who voted for it feeling that they had committed themselves on any other related issue—the exact amount to be spent under the Marshall Plan, for instance, or the extension of the Trade Agreements Act.

Yet as soon as these assurances had mustered enough votes to put the Marshall Plan itself on the statute-books, the spokesmen began playing quite a different tune.

Members of Congress were told, with reference to the appropriation, that they "had" to vote for the full amount referred to in the authorization bill. Any reduction would automatically be construed abroad as a weakening of our national unity. And as for the Reciprocal Trade Agreements, Congress was notified that this program was part of the heart and soul of the Marshall Plan, and that this Act was to be extended without change.

For a long period of time, Congress writhed unhappily under these "mouse-trapping" tactics, perhaps unwilling to admit that the members could not rely on some of the statements of their own leaders in Congress—even of their fellow-partisans.

If that was the case, they've begun to cut their eye-teeth. Moreover, they've now found something to do about it! And the first result of their new treatment has been gratifying screams of anguish from the smarties who had been using these tricks to fool their colleagues in Congress.

ELECTIONS MOVING TOWARD SPOTLIGHT

Primary Balloting Will Take Place in State On Sept. 13th

TO PASS ON THE BONUS

By John Harms
HARRISBURG, July 15 — (INS)—Local government elections moved toward the political spotlight today with voters preparing to choose several hundred municipal officials including mayors of 21 cities.

The primary balloting will be held September 13 and the general election November 8.

The only major office to be considered on a statewide basis will be the $21,000-a-year Superior Court post held by Judge William E. Hirt, of Erie. Hirt probably will be endorsed for another 10-year term.

The proposed 500 million dollar bonus for World War II veterans also will be submitted to the electorate on a statewide basis. A simple majority will decide whether the bonus—already sanctioned by the legislature—will be paid starting in 1950.

DOYLESTOWN, July 16—Charged with reckless flying over Solebury Deer Park summer camp of the latter Day Salts near New Hope last Saturday afternoon, David H. Beckmann, 27, of Philadelphia, was fined $50 and costs yesterday noon at a hearing before Justice of the Peace William Wrigley, at Edison.

The prosecutor in the case was Pvt. Stanley Kramer, of the Reading barracks of State Police, in charge of air inspection.

According to Trooper Kramer's investigation, Beckmann was piloting a two-seater Piper Cub that he had hired at the Flying Dutchman Air Service, at Somerton. His passenger on the flight to the Solebury section was James Mangano, 20, of Philadelphia, who escaped without injury. Beckmann received slight lacerations and bruises.

Beckmann, who knew a number of friends at Deer Park, was stunting for their benefit, when the accident happened. No testimony was offered by Beckmann, who paid his fine to Justice Wrigley, and then left.

THE DU PONTS

The Du Pont enterprises, now
under anti-monopoly attack by the government, were founded in 1800 by Eleuthere Irenee du Pont, an immigrant from France who started a small black powder firm
near Wilmington, Del.

Profits of the E. I. du Pont de
Nemours plant averaged $7,000
annually over the first six years.
In the war of 1812 this plant was principal source of U. S. powder.

It has grown steadily since to an industrial empire with $1,585,- 000,000 in assets. The principal unit produces rayon, plastics,
nylon, cellophane, anti-freeze,
gunpowder and pigments. The Du Pont family has an interest of 23 per cent in General Motors,
owns 17 per cent of the U. S.
Rubber Company, and has interests in companies making tetra-
ethyl lead, ethyl fluid, ethyl
chloride and refrigerants.

The government, in an action
reminiscent of the Standard Oil
case of nearly 40 years ago, demands dissolution of this empire,
charging price collusion and
stifled competition.

The company denies the charges, declaring there have been no illegal practices and declaring that the enterprise is against the public interest. It charges the government is attacking "bigness in business as such."

It is difficult to see what grounds the government has for jealousy so far as "big business"
is concerned. The Washington politicians' tax "take" for a two-week period exceeds the entire value of the Du Pont industrial empire.

FIRST DECISION

Its first decision in the more than two years it has been in existence has been handed down by the International Court of Justice
at the Hague. Organized in 1946
as an adjunct to the United Nations, it was to deal with only such cases as were given it by the parent body.

Meanwhile, its 15 judges, each drawing a yearly salary of $21,000—most of it provided by American taxpayers, of course—
have been waiting for something to do. Cost of the court to date has been more than $1,000,000.

The case wasn't of great importance. Albania had secretly mined international waters. As a result two British destroyers were sunk, killing 44 seamen and injuring 42. England put in a claim for $3,800,000 damages, which has just been awarded by
the court.

Albania, under Russian domi-
nation, will not pay the damages.
Technically, Russia could be held responsible for its satellite's debts.
But Russia never pays either. So far as actual results are concerned, the work of the court amounts to nothing.

Visionaries have long dreamed of an international court which would effectively settle controversies between the various countries. But, unless it had an international army, stronger than any other armed force on earth, at it command, an international court never could amount to a hill of beans.

A New Strategy

The first instance was noted in these columns yesterday. Congress had long sought to learn what the Marshall Plan officials wanted to do with the $4,000,000,000 appropriation they were asking. They were particularly eager to find out why the appropriation was considered untouchable, despite the rapid decline in prices since the estimate was made.

When a Senate Committee received a report on this matter, breaking the requested appropriation down into purposes, they tried out their new strategy. What they did was to approve the appropriation—but to tie a large part of it down to the use which the Marshall Plan officials had set forth.

The Marshall Planners burst into a howl. In the process of protesting, they let the cat out of the bag. The "purposes" sent to Congress were merely for the purpose of lulling that body into releasing the money. The Marshall Planners really had something quite different in mind—and obviously, something they didn't want to tell Congress!

Senator Taft, in opposing the Atlantic Pact because of the uncertain nature of our commitments to arm various European nations who are co-signers, also has used this tactic with telling success.

For days, Taft has been trying to pin the spokesmen for the Pact down to a simple "yes or no" on the question of whether a man who voted for the Pact itself would later be free to oppose the arms authorization.

He has had every conceivable answer, except "yes" or "no." Most of the answers, however, have been obvious attempts to dress up "no" to sound like "yes." The clear intention of the "internationalists" in Congress and in the Administration has been to make the Senators think they could safely vote for the Pact itself, even though they opposed the arms authorization—and then later confront them with the proposition that a vote for the Atlantic Pact was a definite commitment to support the giving of American weapons to European governments.

Samples of the answers which Taft's inquiries drew are worth examining closely, to see how neatly they pave the way for this type of double-dealing.

Secretary of State Acheson said:

"There is an obligation to help, but the extent, the manner, and the timing is up to the honest judgment of the parties."

"The timing and the nature and the extent of implementing legislation, in this or any other year, are, in my opinion, wide open to the free decision of all Senators."

Senator Taft, after listening to this and a great deal of other double-talk in reply to his own simple question, found a way to force the matter to an issue—the same way which the Senate Committee used when it suspected that it was being kidded along by the bureaucrats in their explanations of what they wanted to do with the Marshall Loan funds.

Noting that all spokesmen for the Pact were trying to imply that the arms question was a separate matter, so that a vote for the Pact was not a commitment to support the arms program, he politely asked that a "reservation" be written into the Senate Resolution approving the treaty—a reservation saying that the United States was not thereby committed to give arms to the other signatories.

This proposal, which meant no more than taking at its face value exactly what the treaty supporters had been pretending to say, had the immediate result of "smoking out" the real sentiments of the Pact spokesmen—the feelings they had been concealing.

Senator Connally, Truman spokesman, declared vigorously that any such reservation (even though simply reciting what the Pact supporters had been saying) would mean such a complete alteration of the treaty that it would have to be renegotiated.

In this matter, too, the new strategy forced the cat out of the bag.
The Administration forces have been compelled to admit just what they were trying to conceal—that the Atlantic Pact DOES commit the United States to give war weapons away to European countries; perhaps even to the full extent Taft has suggested, that of arming all treaty members for the next twenty years.

Woman 90 Years Old Keeps Abreast of Times

DOYLESTOWN, July 16.—A woman who on Wednesday marked her 90th birthday anniversary is believed to be the only native of Doylestown who has resided here for that length of time. The celebrant is Mrs. William C. Newell.

Mrs. Newell's husband died in 1918. For over a half century she has lived at 187 E. Court street.

Mrs. Newell, who until a month ago was able to have her chauffeur drive her down town several times a day, shop, attend luncheons and meetings, is now confined to her home.

Since her illness she has had nurses in attendance, but so keen and interested is she in what is going on that she has one of the nurses read newspaper items to her.

The well-known county seat matron, who attended the "Old Academy" here and later a school in Germantown, received many cards, flowers and other reminders of her birthday anniversary.

The peace of true fellowship, the peace of fearless living and deep devotion to Thee! The peace of guileless conscience and a regenerated heart. The peace of boundless love and infinite grace! Elections Moving Toward Spotlight

Nineteen of the 47 third class cities will elect mayors including Shamokin which will abandon its borough status in January when officials chosen in November will administer its affairs.

Burgesses for the approximately 940 boroughs in Pennsylvania will be elected. Other borough jobs before the voters will be about one-half of all councilmen, one auditor and a tax collector in each borough. 20 controllers, about 1,000 Justices of the Peace and roughly one-half of all constables, the bureau's figures showed.

The state's 61 first class townships will elect about one-half of the township commissioners, half of the auditors, all of the township treasurers and all townships.

SECOND WARD WINS OVER FIFTH WARD BY WIDE MARGIN

Second Ward A. C. battered the Fifth Ward Sporting Club into submission last evening in a Bristol Softball League game on Memorial Park field. Final score was 15-7.

The winners had a total of 16 hits with every player in the lineup getting at least one hit. "Jim" Sottile led the batting attack with a home run and single in three trips to the plate.

"Mike" Angelo started on the hill for the winning aggregation and left in the third when he became wild after Henry Liberatore smacked out a home run. He walked four batters in succession before "Chick" Stansky came to the rescue and fanned Dan DIMidio for the third out. Angelo was the winning pitcher.

Fifth Ward used three hurlers in the game. "Pete" Mancini started and lasted until the fourth when Liberatore took over the job. Liberatore gave way to Paul Paolillo in the sixth. The latter did not allow a run and gave up one hit.

It was the Second Ward's 16th win of the season and increased its lead on first place in the circuit. Manager "Lou" Angelo's team has eight games remaining on the schedule.

TRENTON LEAGUE GAME HERE

St. Ann's A. A. and the American Steel teams will cross bats tomorrow afternoon in a Trenton Industrial League game on Memorial Park field. The winners of the game will take second place in the league standing.

Manager "Spike" Scordia will send either Stan Stevenson or Tony Cauti to the hill to face the Steelers with Joe Elmer behind the plate. The "Saints" have found the American Steel team the toughest team in the loop to beat.

Manager Scordia was a bit disappointed with his boys against the Lalor team which defeat cost St. Ann's second place in the league standing. Errors caused the locals to lose the game.

Game tomorrow will begin at two-thirty o'clock sharp.

These sources predicted that Mr. Snyder's impressions during the current European tour were likely to influence United States foreign economic policy to a large degree.

NEWPORTVILLE WINS OVER TOWNSHIP TEAM

The Newportville Redskins won their seventh game of the Bristol Youth League last evening by downing the Township team, 6-1, on the latter's diamond.

Paul Schmitt, Redskins' moundsman, held Township to two hits, a single by John Paone in the fourth and another by Carl Anderson in the seventh. The Newportville hurler struck out ten and issued three walks, two coming in "the final frame when Township loaded the bases.

The winning team had eight hits off Turner with Harry Saul getting a pair of three-baggers and "Eddie" Oliver connecting for a triple and two-bagger.

Remind Veterans of The Standard Eligibility Rules

HARRISBURG, July 16 (INS)—The Bureau of Employment and Unemployment Compensation today reminded veterans seeking jobless pay in addition to G. I. schooling subsistence benefits that they must meet standard eligibility requirements.

Director Amj. Caruso explained that although a recent ruling allowed veterans to collect both subsistence and unemployment benefits, each ex-serviceman seeking simultaneous payments must comply with requirements which apply to any other claimant.

The dual-payment ruling was handed down by the Unemployment Compensation Board of Review in the case of Harold P. Ganz, of Scranton. The Board contended that subsistence payments by the Federal government to veterans enrolled in a G. I. approved school were not wages or remuneration for services, thus not disqualifying veterans for jobless benefits.

Caruso pointed out, however, that the ruling emphasized that each claimant must meet all the tests for eligibility set up in the State Unemployment Compensation Law. They are:

1. He must previously have earned a certain minimum amount in work covered by the UC law.
2. He must not be unemployed through any fault of his own or through direct interest in an industrial dispute.
3. He must be able and available for suitable work. (Thus when offered a suitable job, a full-time student would be required to leave school and accept it.)
4. He must not be employed or receiving any wages or remuneration for services.
5. He must register for work and file an application for benefits at his local state employment office and must report to the office at least once weekly.

"Ed" Kornichuck and Earl Jeffries pitched for the firemen and were touched for eight hits. Manager Frank Profy and Barbetta each had two hits for St. Ann's.

Realtor Says Market Is Active in Lower Bucks

According to Richard W. Fechtenburg, Eddington realtor, the real estate market is very active in lower Bucks County, with a great demand for bungalows between City Line and Morrisville in the $5,000 to $10,000 price range.

While two-bedroom homes are generally acceptable and dining rooms are not often considered a prime factor, there seems to be a general desire for a utility room.

"In the two-bedroom bungalows, possible expansion for an additional bedroom in the future is desirable, particularly for young couples," Fechtenburg pointed out. "And just as the utility room is an attractive feature to the woman interested in a new home, so are the men generally interested in a basement or at least room for a workshop."

"The demand for small, compact bungalows with sufficient ground for a garden is greatest among new-layers and also older couples whose children have grown up and left home."

In the last week the Fechtenburg office sold a very small but charming home to the owners of a large home, which, in turn, has been sold to a couple disposing of a still larger home. All these properties were in excellent condition and these sales simply bear out the trend toward compact, efficient living.

"Naturally, the larger home units do not stand idle very long for these are also needed for the families which are larger in size, but in the great majority of cases the demand is for the four- and five-room bungalow in the suburbs," the spokesman said.

If Disaster Ever Overtakes America It Will Have Been Created In Our Own Midst

Surely, no one will predict that the high level of national income of 1948 will be maintained in the current year.

Already we have seen a steady increase in unemployment and a serious drop in industrial production. Many plants have shut down. Thousands of workers have been laid off. Others are working part time.

The Department of Commerce reports, as of July first, that nearly 4 million people are out of work. National income is dropping, but the cost of government keeps climbing higher and higher.

Are we to increase taxes and dry up initiative and investment capital?

The best economists are authority for the statement that the veterans and their families will pay 80 per cent of all the taxes.

Are we to go deeper and deeper into debt? Are we to sacrifice the high standard of living of the American working man to support the high cost of government?

My comrades, if we are to avert a disastrous depression and save ourselves from national bankruptcy we must not adopt any of these methods.

There is only one sound, common sense way to meet this problem. It is the same way you would meet it. That is to cut down expenses.

The cost of government must be reduced. Waste must be eliminated. The recommendations of the Hoover Commission for efficiency and economy must be adopted.

Government spending must be held to a minimum.

Unless we adopt this policy—like the individual who spends beyond his means—we must go broke.

If we are to retain our freedom we must return to sound fiscal policies. A strong, solvent America is a free America.

The third danger arises from the confused and bungling foreign policy which lost the peace after your victory on the battlefields of the world.

That victory was paid for in the blood and suffering of your comrades. They fought and died to bring freedom and the God-given rights of mankind to the victims of cruel tyranny and oppression.

Instead, by secret agreements and double dealing at Yalta, Tehran and Potsdam, millions of those who looked to us for liberation are now imprisoned. They are enslaved behind the iron curtain of Godless Russia.

Those secret agreements may have planted the seeds of a third world conflict. God grant that your sons may not be called into the hell-fire of war to correct the mistakes of the bungling diplomats.

Today the same type of foreign policy is threatening our own economy and the welfare of the American worker.

The so-called reciprocal trade agreement policy is being so mismanaged that thousands of American workers are being driven out of their jobs by a flood of goods produced by cheap foreign labor.

Right here in Pennsylvania rayon, watches, glass, china, pottery, leather goods and oil are being imported to the detriment of our own workers.

All of these industries have been hard hit by foreign competition.

most of it built up by American dollars.

We must not reduce American wages or the American standard of living to meet competition from the cheap labor of foreign countries.

I do not oppose genuine reciprocal trade agreements, beneficial to both contracting countries.

But I am opposed to the planners who want to improve conditions in every country but our own.

It is time for the American people and those in authority to start thinking about America and the welfare of the American worker.

Surely, all of us want to help restore prosperity to the needy nations of the world. We want to raise their standard of living. But if we must lower our own living standards, and take jobs away from the American worker then it is high time to call a halt on such a policy.

As for me, I shall cast my vote on the side of the American worker and to protect his opportunity to have a good job at good wages.

That is another step in the preservation of American freedom in which your organization can play an important part.

I have reviewed briefly three of the principal dangers to the future of America.

I know that every one of you, as members of this great organization, is dedicated to the preservation of our Republic and the God-given rights which it guarantees.

One of the sacred causes to which the Veterans of Foreign Wars is dedicated is to assist our disabled comrades and to care for the dependents of those who made the supreme sacrifice.

If we fail to safeguard our nation against the dangers of state socialism, national bankruptcy and a bungling foreign policy we shall betray our solemn obligation as members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and as Americans.

Again, I say to you, we are in a time of crisis. I appeal to you to go forward in the service of our country with the same patriotic courage as you did when you faced the enemy in battle.

We will lose everything if we shirk our responsibilities.

We must work for a strong economy through gainful employment for all our people. We must strive always for a strong, dynamic, solvent America.

We must be strong financially and in military power.

And most important, our country must be strong spiritually, emulating the tolerance, good will and love of God of William Penn and the pioneers who built the foundation of freedom in our beloved land.

IF DISASTER EVER OVERTAKES AMERICA IT WILL HAVE BEEN CREATED IN OUR OWN MIDST

U. S. Senator Edward Martin Tells Veterans of Foreign Wars of Three Dangers Which Threaten America — Presents Able Study of A Developing Crisis

(Because it is one of the ablest studies yet presented of the developing crisis facing the United States, the following address of U. S. Senator Edward Martin, Pennsylvania, is printed in full. The address was delivered to the Department of Pennsylvania Veterans of Foreign Wars on July 9, during the annual convention in Philadelphia.)

It is an honor to salute you as veterans who have served our country with loyalty and fidelity in many lands across the sea.

You are fighting men. You have been tested in battle. You have accomplished great things for the United States.

As an organization you have grown strong in influence and prestige because your objective in war and peace has been the defense of the most precious thing in the world—American freedom.

Your convention is dedicated to the highest ideals of Americanism. It is therefore appropriate that your meeting is held in the City of Philadelphia where individual freedom took root and flourished for the first time in the world.

Here in the wilderness, William Penn launched his Holy Experiment in government, recognizing the basic human rights of social, political and religious liberty.

Here the world's greatest document of freedom—the Declaration of Independence—was drafted and adopted. Here is the Liberty Bell and the birthplace of our Flag.

The Constitution of the United States, written here in Philadelphia, was based on the proposition that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.

Prior to its adoption no people on earth enjoyed that type of government.

Here men were free to think and speak, to meet in peaceable assembly, and to petition their government for redress of grievances.

They were protected in their God-given rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. They had the right to work at the job of their choice.

Above all, each individual was free to worship God in the manner dictated by his own conscience.

You all know these historic truths but they are worth retelling in meetings such as this. They are forceful reminders that individual freedom is the foundation of American greatness.

My comrades, when that freedom was threatened by foreign tyranny and aggression, America called upon you for service and sacrifice.

Today it has become necessary to sound another call for the defense of America. Not because we fear a foreign foe. American freedom will never be lost through foreign aggression. If disaster should ever overtake us it will have been created in our own midst.

There are three dangers that threaten America:

First—State Socialism or the welfare state. That can destroy the American system of free enterprise. It would mean dictatorship and the loss of all freedom.

Second—Depression and national bankruptcy. Through wasteful and extravagant spending by government and excessive taxation we are travelling along the road to financial collapse. Again the end result would be dictatorship and the loss of all freedom.

Third—a bungling policy in foreign affairs. This has robbed millions of people of their hope for freedom and now threatens our American way of life.

We are under fire on these three fronts. The time has come when we must fight to safeguard the whole structure of American liberty.

Let us consider the so-called welfare state which is another name for state socialism or its tough brother, communism.

Under that system the state is all-powerful. The government regulates, controls and directs the lives of the people under a planned and regimented economy.

It deprives the individual of all freedom in return for the false promise of security and an easy way of life.

Handouts from the government take the place of self-reliance and initiative. Work and thrift become forgotten virtues.

The people become soft. Living standards become low.

That, my comrades, is the way to

dictatorship and enslavement. Hope of security without loss of liberty is a cruel delusion.

Germany and Italy are tragic examples. The financial difficulties in which England finds herself today are the direct result of her experimentation in socialism.

Without American aid England would be cold and hungry, facing a hopeless situation.

Are we to be led along the same disastrous course?

Or shall we mobilize the forces of freedom, the veterans organizations, the rank and file of labor, the business men, our churches and educational leaders in a crusade to preserve the American system?

The one element responsible for the vast productive capacity of America and its foremost place in the world was freedom of the individual.

Other nations had resources equal to ours or even greater. But none has enjoyed the rights and privileges guaranteed to every citizen under the American system.

The present trend toward a socialistic pattern of government threatens those precious liberties. So-called welfare programs have been proposed that would make everyone dependent upon government.

These socialistic proposals sound attractive. They are presented as something the government is giving to the people free of cost.

That is false. The government has nothing to give except what it takes from the pockets of the taxpayers.

That is why I plead with you, my fellow veterans, to examine the history of the nations that have tried these same experiments.

Organizations like this must spearhead a drive to arouse the American people. It is most important that they have the courage to say "no" when demagogues offer something for nothing.

In the battle against advancing socialism individual freedom can be preserved only if we are imbued with the spirit of work, thrift and self-reliance. We must have confidence in our country, confidence in each other and faith in God.

Now let us turn to the second threat to our freedom, the danger of a ruinous depression and national bankruptcy.

Ten days ago, when the Federal government closed its books for the fiscal year 1949, we were one billion, 811 million dollars in the red for that year alone.

This shocking, peace-time deficit shot the national debt up to almost 253 billion.

In the fiscal year of 1949 the Federal government spent more than 49 billion dollars, a new high record for peace time.

Remember—this deficit followed the calendar year of 1948 when we enjoyed a record breaking national income.

In the face of this alarming situation, a budget has been proposed increasing the cost of government to 42 billion in the new fiscal year.

In addition, a great variety of new and expanded spending programs would add many more billions to the proposed budget figure.

Hammerstein's Son Is Following Dad's Steps

DOYLESTOWN, July 16—Following in his famous father's footsteps is James Hammerstein, 18-year-old son of Oscar Hammerstein, 2d, producer and lyricist, of "Highland Farm."

The young man is interested in writing the music of songs rather than the lyrics.

The young collegian has written several songs for his university productions. He collaborated with Mark Barker on a revue, "Meow," and acted in the George S. Kaufman one-act play, "If Men Played Bridge the Way Women Do."

A member of the freshman tennis team, Hammerstein expects to try varsity next year. He is majoring in music, but will spend the summer on his father's 40-acre farm, where he will take part in the raising of Aberdeen Angus beef cattle.

Of all the lyrics his father has written, young Hammerstein's favorite is "Ole Man River," from the Jerome Kern-Oscar Hammerstein musical production of Edna Ferber's best seller, "Show Boat."

Activities of Interest To All in The Various Communities

GLEANED BY SCRIBES

A picnic lunch was served to 35 members and friends who were present at the meeting of Newtown Garden Club at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Yunker, Newtown, this week.

The business session was in charge of the president, Mrs. Russell Janney, and at that time it was decided to furnish flowers at meetings of Newtown New Century Club. Members reported the distribution of more than 100 bouquets the past month.

Mrs. Warren McDowell has been presenting shut-ins at Newtown Friends' Boarding Home, flowers cut from her garden.

Mrs. Harry Horne and Mrs. Raymond Taylor had charge of the program following the business session. This included the showing of slides concerning gardens and landscapes. The pictures were loaned to the club by Michael Rapunano.

Mrs. Horne also conducted a quiz on gardening and landscaping.

Two teachers and a janitor were employed by the Perk-Sell school board at its meeting Wednesday, and announcement has been made that only one vacancy on the faculty remains to be filled.

George K. Walton, Allentown, was elected as a teacher in the commercial department to take the

A NEW STRATEGY

Some smart tactician in Congress has finally worked out a new strategy of dealing with the high-binders who tell Congress one thing one time—and then "run out" on their statements when it suits their convenience.

Endless trouble has been caused in the legislative branch by this ruthless method. Over and again, Congress has agreed to proposals made by the White House, or the bureaucrats, or fellow-members, on apparently definite assurances that what they were doing would be interpreted in a certain way—only to be laughed at later for being so glib.

Congress has appropriated money for supposedly specific purposes, and later seen it used for something quite different—once the bureaucrats got their fingers on it. It has given grants of power to administrative officials on the promise that the power would be used one way—and subsequently found the power-greedy officials using the authority in manners to which Congress never would have agreed.

This situation has been especially disturbing in the broad field of foreign affairs. Here the White House lobby and the handful of Republicans who have been working with them seem to have adopted the theory that the end justified any means. Bare-faced deception has been used over and over to get Congress to agree to schemes which eventually turned out to be quite different from what had been described.

A few examples, when the Marshall Plan was submitted a year and a half ago, many Administrative spokesmen (some from both parties) assured Congress that the general authorization could be approved without the members who voted for it feeling that they had committed themselves on any other related issue—the exact amount to be spent under the Marshall Plan, for instance, or the extension of the Trade Agreements Act.

Yet as soon as these assurances had mustered enough votes to put the Marshall Plan itself on the statute-books, the spokesmen began playing quite a different tune.

Members of Congress were told, with reference to the appropriation, that they "had" to vote for the full amount referred to in the authorization bill. Any reduction would automatically be construed abroad as a weakening of our national unity. And as for the Reciprocal Trade Agreements, Congress was notified that this program was part of the heart and soul of the Marshall Plan, and that this Act was to be extended without change.

For a long period of time, Congress writhed unhappily under these "mouse-trapping" tactics, perhaps unwilling to admit that the members could not rely on some of the statements of their own leaders in Congress—even of their fellow-partisans.

If that was the case, they've begun to cut their eye-teeth. Moreover, they've now found something to do about it! And the first result of their new treatment has been gratifying screams of anguish from the smarties who had been using these tricks to fool their colleagues in Congress.

ELECTIONS MOVING TOWARD SPOTLIGHT

Primary Balloting Will Take Place in State On Sept. 13th

TO PASS ON THE BONUS

By John Harms
HARRISBURG, July 15—(INS)—Local government elections moved toward the political spotlight today with voters preparing to choose several hundred municipal officials including mayors of 21 cities.

The primary balloting will be held September 13 and the general election November 8.

The only major office to be considered on a statewide basis will be the $21,000-a-year Superior Court post held by Judge William E. Hirt, of Erie. Hirt probably will be endorsed for another 10-year term.

The proposed 500 million dollar bonus for World War II veterans also will be submitted to the electorate on a statewide basis. A simple majority will decide whether the bonus—already sanctioned by the legislature—will be paid starting in 1950.

Recently Graduated From Officers' School

FORT DIX, N. J., July 16—Sergeant First-Class, John C. McGowan, son of Mrs. John McGowan, of 128 Schumacher Drive, Bristol, Pa., recently graduated from the 9th Infantry Division's three-weeks Advanced Noncommissioned Officers School, which is designed to train potential top-ranking NCO's and junior officers for the U. S. Army.

Sergeant McGowan was selected to attend the Advanced NCO School because of his outstanding qualifications and excellent performance of duty at Fort Dix, where he is assigned to Company M, 6th Infantry Regiment.

Training at the school he attended combines lecture and practical field exercise methods. The lecture classes, taught by veteran noncommissioned and commissioned officers of the 9th Infantry Division, include such subjects as personnel management, military intelligence, customs of the service, supply production, food service facilities, troop information programs, and methods of teaching.

Students also receive practical experience in administrative work by preparing morning reports and sick reports and dealing with problems in office management. Field exercises consist of marching, drills, and map and compass reading on actual terrain locations.

The program was considered by the P. T. A. leaders to be the most successful in the school's history. Two sessions were conducted each day, one at the local unit level, and one on the council and district work. State Parent-Teacher officers and committee chairmen acted as a faculty, instructing in all phases of Parent-Teacher work.

Mrs. A. J. Nicely, of Erie, past president of Pennsylvania Congress of Parents and Teachers, was in charge of the sessions.

TWO HELD WITHOUT BAIL FOR ROBBERY

Crime Allegedly Took Place Near King Farms On July 6th

ROBBED TAXI DRIVER

FALLSINGTON, July 16—Two brothers are held without bail for a hearing at the next term of court charged with robbery by violence with an accomplice. The hearing was before Justice of Peace John C. Melvin, Falls Township.

Committed to the Bucks County jail, Doylestown, on the charge were Emmett Brown, 20, and Lonnie Brown, 27, both of Climax, Ga. They pleaded guilty to beating and robbing a Trenton taxi driver, Charles Callan, of 119 Passaic street, and taking his cab near King Farms, Falls township, on the night of July 6, Judge Melvin said.

Callan testified at the hearing that he picked up the two men in Trenton and was approaching Turkey Hill, near King Farms, when they ordered him to stop, saying they intended to drive the cab to New York.

"I reached for a club and began defending myself, but slipped in the tussle and was beaten into semi-consciousness," Callan said. "They dragged me off the road and took my wrist watch and wallet."

The men were arrested in Aiken, S. C., two days after the robbery and waived extradition. They were returned to Falls Township Thursday by Pvt. Keith R. Dane of the Langhorne state police station, and Chief Deputy Sheriff Harry Ross of Bucks County.

Franklin Kirby, Falls Township police officer, conducted the initial investigation in the case.

When apprehended at Aiken it is stated the two were in the taxi, from which it is alleged the "Taxi" dome light had been removed.

Fined for Reckless Flying Over A Summer Camp

DOYLESTOWN, July 16—Charged with reckless flying over Solebury Deer Park summer camp of the Latter Day Saints near New Hope last Saturday afternoon, David H. Beckmann, 27, of Philadelphia, was fined $50 and costs yesterday noon at a hearing before Justice of the Peace William Wrigley, at Edison.

The prosecutor in the case was Pvt. Stanley Kramer, of the Reading barracks of State Police, in charge of air inspection.

According to Trooper Kramer's investigation, Beckmann was piloting a two-seater Piper Cub that he had hired at the Flying Dutchman Air Service, at Somerton. His passenger on the flight to the Solebury section was James Mangun, 29, of Philadelphia, who escaped without injury. Beckmann received slight lacerations and bruises.

The plane crashed to the ground in a woods about 1,000 feet from Deer Park Lake, while Beckmann was stunting. One of the tail wheels caught in a tree, causing the plane to crash. More than 200 persons at Deer Park saw the plane come down.

Beckmann, who knew a number of friends at Deer Park, was stunting for their benefit, when the accident happened. No testimony was offered by Beckmann, who paid his fine to Justice Wrigley, and then left.

THE DU PONT

The Du Pont enterprises, now
under anti-monopoly attack by the government, were founded in 1800 by Eleuthere Irenee du Pont,
an immigrant from France who
started a small black powder firm
near Wilmington, Del.

Profits of the E. I. du Pont de
Nemours plant averaged $7,000
annually over the first six years.
In the war of 1812 this plant was principal source of U. S. powder.

It has grown steadily since to
an industrial empire with $1,585-000,000 in assets. The principal
unit produces rayon, plastics,
nylon, cellophane, anti-freeze,
gunpowder and pigments. The Du Pont family has an interest of 23 per cent in General Motors,
owns 17 per cent of the U. S.
Rubber Company, and has interests in companies making tetra-
ethyl lead, ethyl fluid, ethyl
chloride and refrigerants.

The government, in an action
reminiscent of the Standard Oil
case of nearly 40 years ago, demands dissolution of this empire,
charging price collusion and
stifled competition.

The company denies the charges, declaring there have been no illegal practices and denying that the enterprise is against the public interest. It charges the government is attacking "honest business as such."

It is difficult to see what grounds the government has for
jealousy so far as "big business"
is concerned. The Washington
politicians' tax "take" for a two-
week period exceeds the entire
value of the Du Pont industrial
empire.

FIRST DECISION

Its first decision in the more than two years it has been in existence has been handed down by the International Court of Justice
at the Hague. Organized in 1946
as an adjunct to the United Nations, it was to deal with only
such cases as were given it by the parent body.

Meanwhile, its 15 judges, each
drawing a yearly salary of $21,000—most of it provided by American taxpayers, of course—
have been waiting for something to do. Cost of the court to date
has been more than $1,000,000.

The case wasn't of great importance. Albania had secretly
mined international waters. As a result two British destroyers were sunk, killing 44 seamen and injuring 42. England put in a claim for $3,800,000 damages,
which has just been awarded by
the court.

Albania, under Russian domi-
nation, will not pay the damages.
Technically, Russia could be held responsible for its satellite's debts.
But Russia never pays either. So far as actual results are concerned, the work of the court amounts
to nothing.

Visionaries have long dreamed of an international court which would effectively settle controversies between the various countries. But, unless it had an international army, stronger than any other armed force on earth, at its command, an international court

A New Strategy

The first instance was noted in these columns yesterday. Congress had long sought to learn what the Marshall Plan officials wanted to do with the $4,000,000,000 appropriation they were asking. They were particularly eager to find out why the appropriation was considered untouchable, despite the rapid decline in prices since the estimate was made.

When a Senate Committee received a report on this matter, breaking the requested appropriation down into purposes, they tried out their new strategy. What they did was to approve the appropriation—but to tie a large part of it down to the use which the Marshall Plan officials had set forth.

The Marshall Plan burst into a howl. In the process of protesting, they let the cat out of the bag. The "purposes" sent to Congress were merely for the purpose of lulling that body into releasing the money. The Marshall Plan really had something quite different in mind—and obviously, something they didn't want to tell Congress!

Senator Taft, in opposing the Atlantic Pact because of the uncertain nature of our commitments to arm various European nations who are co-signers, also has used this tactic with telling success.

For days, Taft has been trying to pin the spokesmen for the Pact down to a simple "yes or no" on the question of whether a man who voted for the Pact itself would later be free to oppose the arms authorization.

He has had every conceivable answer, except "yes" or "no." Most of the answers, however, have been obvious attempts to dress up "no" to sound like "yes." The clear intention of the "internationalists" in Congress and in the Administration has been to make the Senators think they could safely vote for the Pact itself, even though they opposed the arms authorization—and then later confront them with the proposition
that a vote for the Atlantic Pact was a definite commitment to support
the giving of American weapons to European governments.

Samples of the answers which Taft's inquiries drew are worth examining closely, to see how neatly they pave the way for this type of double-dealing.

Secretary of State Acheson said:
"There is an obligation to help, but the extent, the manner, and the timing is up to the honest judgment of the parties." Said
Senator Vandenberg:

"The timing and the nature and the extent of implementing legislation, in this or any other year, are, in my opinion, wide open to the free decision of all Senators."

Senator Taft, after listening to this and a great deal of other double-
talk in reply to his own simple question, found a way to force the matter to an issue—the same way which the Senate Committee used when it explained that it was being kidded along by the bureaucrats in their explanations of what they wanted to do with the Marshall Loan funds.

Noting that all spokesmen for the Pact were trying to imply that the arms question was a separate matter, so that a vote for the Pact was not a commitment to support the arms program, he politely asked that a "reservation" be written into the Senate Resolution approving the treaty—a reservation saying that the United States was not thereby committed to give arms to the other signatories.

This proposal, which meant no more than taking at its face value exactly what the treaty supporters had been pretending to say, had the immediate result of "smoking out" the real sentiments of the Pact
spokesmen—the feelings they had been concealing.

Senator Connally, Truman spokesman, declared vigorously that any such reservation even though simply reciting what the Pact supporters
had been saying would mean such a complete alteration of the treaty that it would have to be renegotiated.

In this matter, too, the new strategy forced the cat out of the bag.
The Administration forces have been compelled to admit just what they were trying to conceal—that the Atlantic Pact DOES commit the United States to give weapons away to European countries, perhaps even to the full extent Taft has suggested, that of arming all treaty members for the next twenty years.

Meanwhile, its 15 judges, each
drawing a yearly salary of $21,000—most of it provided by American taxpayers, of course—

A New Strategy

The first instance was noted in these columns yesterday. Congress had long sought to learn what the Marshall Plan officials wanted to do with the $4,000,000,000 appropriation they were asking. They were particularly eager to find out why the appropriation was considered untouchable, despite the rapid decline in prices since the estimate was made.

When a Senate Committee received a report on this matter, breaking the requested appropriation down into purposes, they tried out their new strategy. What they did was to approve the appropriation—but to tie a large part of it down to the use which the Marshall Plan officials had set forth.

The Marshall Plan burst into a howl. In the process of protesting, they let the cat out of the bag. The "purposes" sent to Congress were merely for the purpose of lulling that body into releasing the money. The Marshall Plan really had something quite different in mind—and obviously, something they didn't want to tell Congress!

Senator Taft, in opposing the Atlantic Pact because of the uncertain nature of our commitments to arm various European nations who are co-signers, also has used this tactic with telling success.

For days, Taft has been trying to pin the spokesmen for the Pact down to a simple "yes or no" on the question of whether a man who voted for the Pact itself would later be free to oppose the arms authorization.

He has had every conceivable answer, except "yes" or "no." Most of the answers, however, have been obvious attempts to dress up "no" to sound like "yes." The clear intention of the "internationalists" in Congress and in the Administration has been to make the Senators think they could safely vote for the Pact itself, even though they opposed the arms authorization—and then later confront them with the proposition
that a vote for the Atlantic Pact was a definite commitment to support
the giving of American weapons to European governments.

Samples of the answers which Taft's inquiries drew are worth examining closely, to see how neatly they pave the way for this type of double-dealing.

Secretary of State Acheson said:
"There is an obligation to help, but the extent, the manner,
and the timing is up to the honest judgment of the parties." Said
Senator Vandenberg:

"The timing and the nature and the extent of implementing legislation, in this or any other year, are, in my opinion, wide open to the free decision of all Senators."

Senator Taft, after listening to this and a great deal of other double-
talk in reply to his own simple question, found a way to force the matter to an issue—the same way which the Senate Committee used when it explained that it was being kidded along by the bureaucrats in their explanations of what they wanted to do with the Marshall Loan funds.

Noting that all spokesmen for the Pact were trying to imply that the arms question was a separate matter, so that a vote for the Pact was not a commitment to support the arms program, he politely asked that a "reservation" be written into the Senate Resolution approving the treaty—a reservation saying that the United States was not thereby committed to give arms to the other signatories.

This proposal, which meant no more than taking at its face value exactly what the treaty supporters had been pretending to say, had the immediate result of "smoking out" the real sentiments of the Pact
spokesmen—the feelings they had been concealing.

Senator Connally, Truman spokesman, declared vigorously that any such reservation even though simply reciting what the Pact supporters
had been saying would mean such a complete alteration of the treaty that it would have to be renegotiated.

In this matter, too, the new strategy forced the cat out of the bag.
The Administration forces have been compelled to admit just what they were trying to conceal—that the Atlantic Pact DOES commit the United States to give weapons away to European countries, perhaps even to the full extent Taft has suggested, that of arming all treaty members for the next twenty years.

Meanwhile, its 15 judges, each
drawing a yearly salary of $21,000—most of it provided by American taxpayers, of course—
have been waiting for something to do. Cost of the court to date
has been more than $1,000,000.

The case wasn't of great importance. Albania had secretly
mined international waters. As a result two British destroyers were sunk, killing 44 seamen and injuring 42. England put in a claim for $3,800,000 damages,
which has just been awarded by
the court.

Albania, under Russian domi-
nation, will not pay the damages.
Technically, Russia could be held responsible for its satellite's debts.
But Russia never pays either. So far as actual results are concerned, the work of the court amounts
to nothing.

Visionaries have long dreamed of an international court which would effectively settle controversies between the various countries. But, unless it had an international army, stronger than any other armed force on earth, at its
command, an international court
never could amount to a hill o'

the church at 11 a. m. For other deter, David Ludwig.

Woman 90 Years Old Keeps Abreast of Times

DOYLESTOWN, July 16—A woman who on Wednesday marked her 90th birthday anniversary is believed to be the only native of Doylestown who has resided here for that length of time. The celebrant is Mrs. William C. Newell.

Mrs. Newell's husband died in 1918. For over a half century she has lived at 187 E. Court street.

Mrs. Newell, who until a month ago was able to have her chauffeur drive her down town several times a day, shop, attend luncheons and meetings, is now confined to her home.

Since her illness she has had nurses in attendance, but so keen and interested is she in what is going on that she has one of the nurses read newspaper items to her.

The well-known county seat nation, who attended the "Old Academy" here and later a school in Germantown, received many cards, flowers and other reminders of her birthday anniversary.
